

MEDIA LITERACY: A SYSTEM FOR LEARNING ANYTIME, ANYWHERE

A research-based approach for change management in schools

Media Literacy: A System for Learning provides teachers with a reliable method for helping students gain information processing skills while also mastering content knowledge. Built around CML's research-based framework, Questions/TIPS (Q/TIPS), a concise and clear method for creating lessons and curricula is included, as well as e-books explaining how 21st Century curricula differs from the lessons of the past, professional development modules for the corresponding parts and Tools for Implementation.

CML's Trilogy Media Literacy: A System for Learning includes resources for: Change Management, Deconstruction and Construction.

Each Part of the Trilogy features an e-book explaining the theory behind CML's system, as well as a Professional Development module, and Tools with practical examples, templates, activities and assessment. Materials can be purchased separately or as a complete package.
