A Recipe for Action: Deconstructing Food Advertising

A media literacy intervention strategy for nutrition education

Media literacy offers an effective and engaging health intervention strategy for reaching students. Learning to understand their relationship with media and with food is a key to students’ healthy food choices and levels of physical activity. This program has been tested across the nation with excellent pre-post test results, from upper elementary school to high school.

Go to www.medialit.com/store to order now!